

What do you get when there is a missing bag of amphetamines, a police officer in trouble, and a suspect who flees after he's been shot?

The 2016 Advanced Moot Court Competition!

Does a police officer's supervisor need a warrant to search his work locker?

Is a person who gets shot but still manages to get away actually seized?

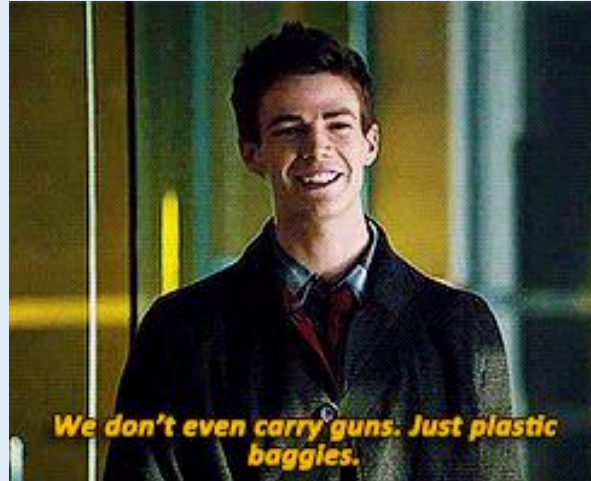

You tell us!

Officer Barry Allen wants to suppress the speed found in his work locker, but the state of Ohioton is gunning for a conviction.

Which side will YOU represent?

Get your co-counsel, draft your brief, and argue your position in front of the "Supreme Court" to take home the win.

There are awards for First and Second Place Winners, Best Brief, and the Top Oral Advocates.

And if you need a little extra help preparing to compete, don't worry—Appellate Advocacy still has spots available for the Fall 2016 semester. The class assignment will revolve around the same issue as the competition, so you can get a leg up on the competition by enrolling on myMemphis with CRN 90187.

For questions about the competition or the course, e-mail Associate Chief Justice of the Advanced Competition, Elizabeth Booker, at ebookerbooker2012@gmail.com or Director of the Advocacy Program, Barbara Kritchevsky, at bkrtchvs@memphis.edu.