University of Memphis Law Review

Re: Faculty Advisor Appointment

Dear Memphis Law students, faculty, and staff,

I am pleased to announce that Professor Kevin Smith has agreed to serve as the next University of Memphis Law Review Faculty Advisor, effective immediately.

Professor Smith currently serves as the Thomas B. Preston Professor of Law and has been a member of the Memphis Law faculty since 1993. He served as Dean of the law school from 2007-2012, overseeing the law school's move downtown to the historic building at 1 North Front Street in the former U.S. Custom House/Federal Courthouse/U.S. Post Office.

His highly regarded devotion to students, attention to detail, excellent record of scholarship, experience leading the law school, and serving our students in various other leadership positions, all serve to make him the ideal candidate to take on this important role. His commitment to academic excellence is unparalleled, while his unique ability to guide students through difficult ideas and processes will be of the utmost value to the University of Memphis Law Review.

I hope you will join me in wishing Professor Smith best of luck and a sincere congratulations as he takes on this new role.

Sincerely,

Katharine T. Schaffzin
Dean
